

WEEK BEGINNING:

SATS

Next week, your children will sit their SATs, marking the end of five terms of work in KS2 at Ipsley. Your children have worked hard and developed so much during their time here. Whilst the SATs are important for your children, they are just a small part of the jigsaw of their school life. It is vital that your child has plenty of sleep and rest, finds time to relax over the weekend doing an activity that they enjoy and eat well before and during the week.

When the children arrive at school, they are entitled to a free breakfast of beans, jam and toast – kindly provided to us by Oakland. This will be available from 8am. Children will then do some revision before a break, during which they will be provided with a snack to ensure that they are well fed and energised for their test.

Tests will take place between break and lunchtime. On Wednesday the arithmetic test will take place before break time and the reasoning test after break.

Your children need to remember important items such as their glasses, pencil cases and water bottles. The school will provide any specialist maths equipment.

Unfortunately, the SATs do not test creativity, how good your child is at sport, making friends or being responsible and independent. We can only ask that your child does the best that they can do – coming to school with a smile, being enthusiastic and confident in their own progress and ability. We are all immensely proud of what they have achieved during their time in KS2 at Ipsley and we wish them all the best for the week ahead. Good luck!!

Friday 12th May

On Friday, Year 6 will be involved in the launch of an incredibly exciting competition, which will mark the end of their SATs and give them a project to look forward to over the coming weeks! All will be revealed on Friday morning!
